How To Recognize An Overdose

Blue or grayish lips and fingernails

Clammy, sweaty skin

Shallow or raspy breathing, snoring or gurgling sounds

Won't wake up by yelling their name or to a sternum rub to the chest

If your friend is still conscious and breathing, make sure to stay with them, and keep them talking and moving if possible.

WATCH THEIR BREATHING!

Someone can slip into an overdose hours after they get high.

Have your Naloxone kit available because you never know when you will need to administer the medicine.

Naloxone, also known by the brand name Narcan, is a safe and effective medication that can reverse the effects of opioid overdose. It is available as a nasal spray, an autoinjector, and an intramuscular needle syringe. Naloxone attaches to the same parts of the brain that receive heroin and other opioids, and it blocks the opioids for 30-90 minutes to reverse the respiratory depression that would otherwise lead to death from overdose.

If you believe someone is experiencing an overdose take the following actions:

1. Check to see if they can respond.
2. Tap their shoulders and yell their name. If you cannot get a response, try a STERNUM RUB (rub your knuckles on their chest bone for about 5-10 seconds).
3. Call 911. Give the address and location. Say "my friend is unconscious, and I can't wake him up" or "my friend isn't breathing."
4. Start Rescue Breathing--make sure nothing is in their mouth. Tilt their head back, pinch their nose, and give a breath every 5 seconds for 30 seconds.
5. Give Naloxone--spray into one nostril. If you have injectable Naloxone, inject into the muscle of the upper arm, upper thigh, or upper/outer quarter of the buttocks.
6. Continue rescue breathing if they have not started to breathe on their own.
7. Give second dose of Naloxone if there is no response after 3 minutes. Continue rescue breathing, one breath every 5 seconds.
8. Administer CPR if the person becomes unresponsive.

After Giving Naloxone:

1. Remind the person that Naloxone can wear off in 30-45 minutes.
2. Lay them on their side in the recovery position.
3. Stay with them until they go to the hospital or until the Naloxone wears off to make sure the overdose does not come back.
4. DO NOT LEAVE THEM ALONE.
5. Contact a family member to let them know their loved one has overdosed and EMS is taking them to the ER.
